Justice is sweet and musical;
but injustice is harsh
and discordant.

HENRY DAVID THOREAU

A FRAMEWORK FOR JUSTICE

In our quest to help bring about a peaceful and prosperous world, we turn to justice to light the way.

“Climate change is the biggest human rights issue in the world.”

MARY ROBINSON President, Mary Robinson Foundation—Climate Justice

JUSTICE AND A CHANGING CLIMATE

On April 22, parties to the UN Framework Convention on Climate Change will gather at UN Headquarters in New York City to sign the historic Paris Agreement. There, global leaders will commit to work in partnership with citizens, businesses, local governments, and civil society to keep a global temperature rise well below 2 degrees Celsius; to address the impacts of climate change; and to protect people living in vulnerable situations.

Climate justice means that the rights and dignity of the most vulnerable are respected; that all nations have a right to development; that the benefits and burdens of implementing change are shared equitably; that decisions are participatory, transparent, and accountable; and that the power of education promotes sustainable climate stewardship.

Post-Paris: A New Era in Global Sustainability?
Thursday, 10:45am

Justice is our north star. It provides the bearings to guide us through territory fraught with tests of character and will.

It steers us to ever more powerful solutions to the pressing problems of our time. It summons in us the courage and fortitude to tackle issues vital to a better future for humanity—from peace and human rights to education, health, economic opportunity, and environmental sustainability.

Today, those suffering most from the crises of our times are sounding a clarion call for justice. Government and business can and must do right by asylum seekers, the wrongly imprisoned, and victims of trafficking, violence, poverty, and climate change.

But to make enough of a difference, in time and at scale, we need social entrepreneurs and their solutions to point the way. Social entrepreneurs know that justice represents a human need as fundamental as food or shelter. Indeed, research shows that children as young as two or three recognize when a wrong has been done and instinctively seek to right it.

Still, there is no question that social entrepreneurs and those of us who partner with them confront formidable odds. We appreciate at a visceral level how entrenched and powerful forces of injustice create the conditions for most of what’s wrong in the world. It’s injustice that robs the poor of opportunities, displaces people from their homes, and consigns too many to lives of misery and hopelessness.

To create and strengthen the institutions on which a just society depends, instinct is insufficient. We must grapple with and grasp how injustice takes root and is sustained. This piece of the social entrepreneur’s discipline is pivotal to success.

In our book, Getting Beyond Better: How Social Entrepreneurship Works, Roger Martin and I discuss the role of this deep understanding. The very arc of the social entrepreneur’s journey begins as she or he realizes the existence of an unjust equilibrium and determines to make sense of it

PRINCIPLES OF CLIMATE JUSTICE

- Respect and protect human rights
- Support the right to development
- Share benefits and burdens equitably
- Ensure that decisions on climate change are participatory, transparent, and accountable
- Highlight gender equality and equity
- Harness the transformative power of education for climate stewardship
- Use effective partnerships to secure climate justice

The city buildings are illuminated, and a large, rectangular, fenced-in area is visible in the middle ground, possibly a park or sports field. The text is overlaid on the upper half of the image.

by engaging with its actors and their roles over the long term.

It is only through such an extended apprenticeship that social entrepreneurs come to appreciate the forces that sustain an unjust equilibrium at the same time that they abhor the resulting suffering. This perspective shifts the social entrepreneur's vision from wishful thinking to active testing of a limited set of interventions: those with the potential to unleash a cascade

ACHIEVABLE GOALS

The flagship Millennium Development Goal to halve the proportion of people living in extreme poverty was not only met but exceeded, with extreme poverty falling to less than 10 percent in 2015.

The next-generation Sustainable Development Goals set forth in September 2015 frame a set of specific targets to end poverty, protect the planet, and ensure prosperity for all.

An extraordinary confluence of calls from all over the world, including from social entrepreneurs, kept the imperative for justice as a foundation of the Goals and were instrumental in the decision to include a specific Goal (16) addressing justice in the final agreement.

It is their hunger for justice that fuels social entrepreneurs' movement from insight to vision, from model-building to impact at scale. On a global level, we can also see this progression in play in the negotiations that produced the 17 Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) adopted by the United Nations last year.

Working behind the scenes, social entrepreneurs from every part of the world and across every issue brought their knowledge and experiences to bear in this process. It's telling that justice is threaded through just about all of the goals and targets. It's also worth underscoring that Goal 16 specifically commits to achieving "access to justice for all" by focusing on peace, justice, and strong institutions.

The path has opened before us, and the work to build or strengthen those institutions—work essential to successful social entrepreneurship—has begun.

Taken together, the SDGs provide the scaffolding for a new and powerful framework for justice. They indicate not

"WHAT GETS MEASURED IS WHAT GETS DONE"

The Social Progress Imperative (SPI) is a framework to guide international development by defining and applying metrics that capture the essence of justice: the ability to meet basic human needs, and the foundations for wellbeing and opportunity.

The ability to measure social progress provides new understanding of the interaction between citizens and governments, and a better yardstick of development that is complementary to GDP.

The SPI goes beyond investigative reporting and one-time snapshots of failures of justice in different societies and toward a comprehensive global picture of where injustice occurs and where it is being addressed or getting worse. Discouraging the cosmetic quick fix, this favors a deeper understanding of root causes and opportunities to make lasting progress.

only that a far more just world can be achieved, but also point to how it can be created. Some have estimated that it will cost between $2 and 3 trillion each year to achieve the envisioned results by 2030—a big number on the face of it, but less than five percent of the global economy.

Do-able? The odds of success get better when social entrepreneurs are joined by business and government, by actors of good faith and common cause across sectors and geographies, and when all work together to craft lasting solutions to the toughest problems of our time.

But just as we have been careful to define social entrepreneurship precisely—

JUSTICE FOR THE DISPLACED

Here in Europe, we also witness the urgent need for fierce compassion as thousands of asylum seekers risk their lives each week, arriving on shores where they are both welcome and their futures are precarious.

The crisis echoes many themes you'll encounter in these Forums. Some will address the ambition (SWF, 2014) of those arriving to build new lives, of the receiving countries to live up to their ideals, and the need for collaboration to achieve large-scale change. Others speak to the belief (SWF, 2015) that solutions can be forged, because we have seen social entrepreneurs take on massively broken and dysfunctional systems many times before.

We will not give up until there are solutions, and we will continue to support and cheer on the social entrepreneurs working to transform our world so it is more peaceful, prosperous, and just.

avoiding the temptation to call any leader having or striving for impact on the world a “social entrepreneur”—we must also be precise in characterizing and addressing justice.

Consider how often we reference “social” justice, as if there were any other kind! Justice is inherently “social” and inextricably linked to how a society functions, how it serves or betrays its principal responsibility to its citizens.

Yet, how we nurture justice, and measure its progress in different areas integral to healthy societies around the world, varies greatly.

We need a robust framework for justice to help us envision and create solutions capable of upending what's wrong in the world by restoring what's right. Only then can we move from the ideal to the realization of “justice for all.” We must learn both to abhor and appreciate the fundamental contradictions within our nature as human beings and in the societies we shape.

We must face squarely the paradox inherent in civilizations revered for their achievements—from ancient Egypt and its pyramids to a U.S. democracy and the rights enshrined in its constitution—and come to terms with the dark side of societies that institutionalized slavery.

We need to determine how the world's most economically advantaged nation also came to be its most punitive, incarcerating more than a quarter of the world's prisoners. And we must also see the refugees driven to Europe's shores as human beings fleeing victimization so they can take charge of their lives. Embracing such paradoxes helps us channel our “fierce compassion” to infuse an unerring sense of justice into the institutions that will ensure dignity and well-being for all human beings.

The Forum aims to highlight both thinking and action, and calls on our community to celebrate and support social entrepreneurs whose dedication to justice—in all its forms—propels their journeys “beyond better” toward real and lasting solutions.

WELCOME TO THE 13TH SKOLL WORLD FORUM

As agents of change, we are challenged to embrace the contradiction at the heart of our work: our feelings of outrage must ignite our impulse to do right by those suffering from injustice. Social entrepreneurs and the innovators who help them solve the world's most pressing problems embody fierce compassion. They don't just rail at what's wrong, they strive to make it right. They imagine a world of peace, sustainability, and shared prosperity and are unrelenting in their efforts to see that vision realized. In so doing, they re-negotiate both the roles and responsibilities traditionally consigned to business, government, or civil society, and help to harness the collective action needed to transform the world.

JEFF SKOLL

Chairman, Jeff Skoll Group
Skoll Foundation, Skoll Global Threats Fund, Participant Media, and Capricorn Investment Group

Jeff Skoll is an entrepreneur devoted to creating a sustainable world of peace and prosperity. Over the last 16 years, he has created an innovative portfolio of philanthropic and commercial enterprises, each a distinctive catalyst for changing the trajectory of issues that most affect the survival and thriving of humanity. This portfolio includes the Skoll Foundation, Skoll Global Threats Fund, Participant Media, and Capricorn Investment Group—all coordinated under the Jeff Skoll Group umbrella.

The Skoll entrepreneurial approach is unique: driving large-scale, permanent social impact by investing in a range of efforts that integrate powerful stories, data, capital markets, technology, partnerships, and organized learning networks. Operating independently from one another yet deeply connected through a shared vision, Skoll organizations galvanize public will, influence policy, and mobilize resources to accelerate the pace and depth of change.

Jeff was the first full-time employee and President of eBay, where he experienced firsthand the power of combining entrepreneurship, technology, and trust in people. His work today embodies those fundamental lessons. All of Jeff's organizations rely on the premise that people are basically good, and that if good people are given the opportunity to do the right thing, they will.

The mission of the Skoll World Forum is to accelerate the impact of the world's leading social entrepreneurs by connecting them with essential partners in collaborative pursuit of learning, leverage, and large-scale social change.

SKOLL FOUNDATION

Sally Osberg, President and CEO

The Skoll Foundation drives large-scale change by investing in, connecting, and celebrating social entrepreneurs and the innovators who help them solve the world's most pressing problems. Founded by Jeff Skoll and led by Sally Osberg, the Foundation's signature program is the Skoll Award for Social Entrepreneurship. Today, the Foundation's portfolio includes 96 organizations and 118 social entrepreneurs around the world.

Getting Beyond Business as Usual: Paving the Way for Social Progress

NELSON MANDELA LECTURE THEATRE

PANEL DISCUSSION

We live in a world in which GDP and quarterly earnings dominate, leaving critical aspects of social progress under-prioritized, underfunded, and marginalized. While solutions exist, their innovators continue to face systemic barriers, structural inefficiencies, and constrained resource flows—blocking benefits to those who need them most. Join leading reformers and systems thinkers to discuss how we can bring about a new status quo: a world in which social progress is valued, and where the most promising solutions are recognized and adopted by those with the power to bring about a just and sustainable future.

INTERVIEW SERIES

Faith is a source of inspiration, wisdom, and influence for 80 percent of the global population. Historically, religion has been an origin of both peace and conflict, but it can also be a potent tool for creating sustainable social progress. From Vatican-led climate change action, to Rumi-inspired peace movements in Afghanistan, and an Imam who is counteracting radicalization over the television, this session highlights problem-solving approaches that have successfully blended faith and culture in radically different global contexts.

PANEL DISCUSSION

Beyond the far-reaching implications of government and corporate accountability regarding data, entrepreneurial organizations are increasingly relying on data collection, storage, and analysis as part of their social impact work. This data is critical to providing metrics to measure success, and can inform interventions down to the individual level. How can social enterprises ensure that in doing good, they are not also doing unintentional harm? This session will examine how entrepreneurs are addressing these challenges.

Stronger Together? Government Collaboration with Social Enterprises in India

SEMINAR ROOM A

ROUNDTABLE

In a perfect public-private partnership, each partner enables and leverages the other's unique strengths. But many view government as inefficient and a source of unnecessary bureaucracy. At the same time, governments remain largely unaware of results achieved by social enterprises and the solutions they deliver to the poor. Through an in-depth, live examination of cases of collaboration between governments and social enterprises, this session will highlight the mutual benefits of collaboration and share lessons learned in overcoming challenges in the process of establishing a partnership.

Opening Plenary

WEDNESDAY 1:45-3:15PM

NEW THEATRE

As our community convenes, we'll explore fierce compassion—and how this apparent contradiction is critical to the work and success of those seeking to create a better, fairer world. We will hear from innovators who have embraced this duality to address some of the most serious challenges faced by humanity today, and consider how we might leverage this idea and our time together to drive lasting change.

Doors open at 1:15pm and seating is general admission. Stewards will guide you to New Theatre, a 10-minute walk from Saïd Business School.

Refugee Crisis: Roots and Remedies

NELSON MANDELA LECTURE THEATRE

PANEL DISCUSSION

Worldwide, an estimated 60 million people have been displaced—a number unprecedented in human history. The war in Syria has been the primary driver of the recent increase, but conflicts in the larger Middle East, Africa, and Asia have all contributed to this global crisis. In a complicated tapestry of actors—NGOs, governments, international institutions—how can we ensure relief is delivered in an effective, responsible manner? How can we develop policies built on equity and opportunity, rather than fear? What opportunities exist to rethink the way we handle future refugee crises—or help us prevent crisis entirely?

The Neuroscience of Fierce Compassion

LECTURE THEATRE 4

INTERVIEW SERIES

What parts of the brain are stimulated when we feel fierce anger or compassion? Can compassion be learned or is it innate? Does empathy have limits, especially for those of us working on the frontlines of social change? Take an extraordinary visual trip through a real brain, and hear from a new wave of researchers using the methods of social psychology and cognitive neuroscience to challenge our views on these questions. Explore how compassion—and its limits—might inform our work as social innovators.

Healthcare as an Engine for Social Transformation

EDMOND SAFRA LECTURE THEATRE

PANEL DISCUSSION

Healthcare can play a catalytic role in driving societal transformation due to its scale, economic clout, infrastructure, engagement in communities, influence, and moral imperative. Healthcare can establish cross-sectoral relationships that not only improve individual health, but build community health and resilience. Come discuss the opportunities and challenges associated with the health sector as a pivotal—but often underestimated—catalyst for broader social transformation and highlight examples where healthcare is part of a broader healing strategy for communities, economies, and the planet.

Moral Stances and Decision Making: A Practical Exploration

SEMINAR ROOM A

ROUNDTABLE

We are equipped and prepared to answer practical questions about our organization's scale, outcomes, cost-effectiveness, and other signals of success. But let's explore a different lens for our work: the moral lens. Whether or not we discuss it openly, moral decisions are at the center of what we do and how we do it. How do we decide which programs or products to prioritize and resource with time and talent? Which deserving client do we serve—perhaps at the expense of others? Is scale or reach more important? We'll help equip each other to answer these questions and translate values into practical models.

Leading Through Adversity

NELSON MANDELA LECTURE THEATRE

PANEL DISCUSSION

Throughout history, from the statehouse to the boardroom, women have been excluded from leadership roles globally. We have a long way to go toward equal representation in positions of power, but the paradigm is beginning to shift. As women increasingly fill leadership roles, evidence is mounting that female leadership is tied to positive outcomes in profits, business ethics, peace, and the public good. Yet, many stereotypes still hold firm. This session will address those taboos, discuss data both positive and inconclusive, and highlight some of the women moving the needle on gender equity in leadership.

Rethinking Giving

PYRAMID ROOM

PANEL DISCUSSION

We're all aiming at the same target: making the world a healthier, safer, and more just place to live. But as a new generation of philanthropists emerges, many are starting to reconsider the ways charitable giving is done. They are pushing the envelope on giving by pooling assets and risk, blending capital to fund entire ecosystems, embedding sustainable practices into global operations, or throwing away programmatic infrastructure altogether to give cash directly to those who need it. We'll hear from those who are rethinking giving, and discuss how funders from New York to Delhi can play to win.

Water: Tenacious, Collaborative Responses to a Global Crisis

LECTURE THEATRE 4

PANEL DISCUSSION

How is it possible that universal access to clean water was achieved centuries ago in Europe, and yet 10% of the current global population still lacks access? The recently minted Sustainable Development Goals provide a renewed opportunity to refocus and redouble efforts to this wicked problem. How will organizations working on the front lines of this issue realign themselves against the persistent and deeply entrenched challenges of the past? Mindfulness for Personal Sustainability: Investing in Change from the Inside Out

SEMINAR ROOM A

SEMINAR

Effective social change requires leaders to remain grounded and discern when it is necessary to take a step back from their efforts to restore themselves. Long-term stress and imbalance can distort and limit our capacities for collaboration, creativity, compassion, problem-solving and relationship-building. Stress can also lead to higher rates of turnover, illness, depression, and poor decision-making. This experiential session will explore a range of mindfulness practices that allow individuals to foster resiliency and ensure personal sustainability.

Post-Paris: A New Era in Global Sustainability?

NELSON MANDELA LECTURE THEATRE

PANEL DISCUSSION

In a remarkable moment in Paris last December, ministers from 195 countries agreed to stop global warming “well below” 2 degrees Celsius. This agreement was decades in the making and represents a strong signal to leaders in the private, public, and social sectors. But now that the celebrations are over, how will countries, industries, and citizens close the gaps on emissions to comply? A mix of political will, investment, culture change, and compassion will be necessary to ensure the agreement is actualized, and climate justice achieved.

Leapfrogging Development: How New Technologies Will Accelerate Change

LECTURE THEATRE 4

SKOLL SHORTS

New technology and applications have the potential to better reach underserved populations, navigate market gaps, and allow developing countries to leapfrog outdated models entirely. Technology is also improving the development community's reach and efficiency, radically changing the way social entrepreneurs work. Breakthrough

Stopping gender-based violence

Violence against women and girls is a largely unrecognized human rights abuse, affecting a third of the world's female population. Policies and education are not enough to accomplish change in the face of deeply held cultural norms. Breakthrough shifts the focus to preventing violence and discrimination by changing society's norms. Mallika and Sonali mobilize communities using popular media, leadership training, and advocacy. They catalyze millennials, especially boys and young men, to recognize the violence and lead the change. Breakthrough has reached 15 million people in rural communities and 350 million through its media campaigns. Mallika and Sonali's work has contributed to raising the average age of marriage by nearly a year in Bihar and Jharkhand, India.

BRYAN STEVENSON

Equal Justice Initiative

Building a just criminal system

The United States has the world's highest incarceration rate, with nearly a third of young black men under some form of criminal justice control. Seeking freedom for the unjustly imprisoned and reform of the system, Bryan Stevenson and Equal Justice Initiative (EJI) take a comprehensive approach. They start with research, share insights with key audiences, and litigate cases with potentially broad impact, building on a foundation of service to incarcerated people and marginalized communities. EJI has won relief for hundreds of wrongfully convicted people (including 115 sentenced to death), successfully argued before the Supreme Court to end life-without-parole sentences for children, challenged excessive sentencing, and engaged the public in acknowledging injustices.

CHUCK SLAUGHTER

Living Goods

Saving lives door-to-door

Nearly 6 million children under the age of five die each year in the developing world. Chuck Slaughter and Living Goods support networks of village health entrepreneurs who go door-to-door teaching families better health practices while selling basic health products including simple treatments for malaria and pneumonia, fortified foods, healthy pregnancy kits, and solar lights. Living Goods' smartphone apps automate diagnoses, send treatment reminders, and track key metrics in real time. Independent randomized research shows the model reduces child deaths by more than 25 percent, for an annual cost of less than $2 per person reached. Currently operating in Uganda and Kenya, and supporting partners advancing the model in Myanmar and Zambia, Living Goods is poised to grow.

VIVEK MARU

Namati

Putting the law in people's hands

Billions of people live outside the protection of the law. They can be driven from their land, extorted by officials, and intimidated by violence. Vivek Maru founded Namati to place the power of the law in the hands of the people. Namati trains and deploys grassroots legal advocates who work with communities to advance justice. Together with its partners, Namati has supported more than 40,000 clients in eight countries to protect community lands, enforce environmental law, and secure basic rights to healthcare and citizenship. Drawing on data from thousands of cases, Namati advocates for improvements to policies and systems that affect millions of people. Namati brings together a global network of more than 500 groups dedicated to legal empowerment.

OREN YAKOBOVICH

Videre

Exposing and ending violence and abuse

Even as technology empowers anyone with a smartphone to be an international broadcaster, the world's most vulnerable populations remain voiceless. Most of the remote places where human rights crises unfold are subject to censorship and communications blackouts, unreachable by traditional media. Videre gives local activists equipment, training and support to safely capture footage of human rights violations, and distributes this evidence strategically to influence media, political leaders, and courts. Its human rights defenders have exposed political intimidation, corruption, and violence. Perpetrators have been exposed and brought to trial, defenders of human rights operate more securely, and leaders who once incited violence have come to warn against it.

SKOLL GLOBAL TREASURE AWARD

TENZIN GYATSO, HIS HOLINESS THE 14TH DALAI LAMA

Although he calls himself a simple Buddhist monk, His Holiness the 14th Dalai Lama, Tenzin Gyatso, is a global icon of peace and understanding. Born in 1935 in northeastern Tibet, he was recognized at the age of two as the reincarnation of the 13th Dalai Lama. He assumed political power after China's 1949-1950 invasion of Tibet and went to Beijing for peace talks in 1954. But with the suppression of the Tibetan national uprising in Lhasa, he was forced to escape into exile in 1959. Since then he has lived in Dharamsala, India. The Dalai Lama has long advocated a "Middle Way Approach" of seeking genuine autonomy for the Tibetan people through peaceful dialogue, within the framework of the People's Republic of China. He was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize in 1989. Beyond his advocacy for nonviolence, the Dalai Lama is recognized as the first Nobel laureate to champion the global environment. In 2011, the Dalai Lama completed the process of democratization of the Tibetan exile administration by transferring all of his political authority to the elected leadership. He has traveled the globe with his message of peace, inter-religious understanding, universal responsibility, and compassion.

PARTICIPANT MEDIA FILM SCREENING: HE NAMED ME MALALA

7:30–9:30pm

New Theatre

He Named Me Malala is an intimate portrait of Nobel Peace Prize Laureate Malala Yousafzai, who was targeted by the Taliban and severely wounded by a gunshot when returning home on her school bus in Pakistan’s Swat Valley. She miraculously survived and is now a leading campaigner for girls’ education globally as Co-founder of the Malala Fund. Acclaimed documentary filmmaker Davis Guggenheim (An Inconvenient Truth, Waiting for Superman) shows us how Malala, her father Zia, and her family are committed to fighting for education for all girls worldwide. The film gives us an inside glimpse into this extraordinary young girl’s life—from her close relationship with her father who inspired her love for education, to her impassioned speeches at the UN, to her everyday life with her parents and brothers. He Named Me Malala is courtesy of Fox Searchlight Pictures in association with Image Nation Abu Dhabi and Participant Media with National Geographic Channel and the Malala Fund.

Panel discussion and Q&A to follow. Speakers to be announced.

Seating is first-come, first-served. The film screening is free of charge, open to the public, and no ticket is necessary.

EXPERIENCE IMMERSIVE STORYTELLING

Virtual Reality Lounge

Collisions is a virtual reality journey, created by artist Lynette Wallworth, that takes you into the homeland of indigenous elder Nyarri

Morgan and the Martu tribe in remote Western Australia. Put on a headset and experience the power of immersive virtual reality storytelling as Nyarri shares his powerful story of first contact with Western science and technology. This 15-minute short will be screened throughout the Forum, with the filmmakers available periodically for Q&A. Please see the screening schedules in the Entrance Hall and Virtual Reality Lounge.

BREAKFAST AND NETWORKING

8:00–9:45am

Collaboration Café

This time is designed to accommodate breakfast meetings, personal time, or networking with other delegates at Saïd Business School. A light breakfast will be served.

GUIDED MEDITATION

8:30–9:30am

West Wing, Seminar 7

Silent meditation reunites body and mind in the present moment. Guided morning meditations are an opportunity to practice this together, and prepare yourself for a mindful Skoll World Forum. Open to all, no experience required. Led by your fellow delegate, Skoll Awardee, and Zen priest, Bart Weetjens.

Challenging Global Wealth Inequality

NELSON MANDELA LECTURE THEATRE

PANEL DISCUSSION

In both developed and developing countries, wealth distribution is increasingly distorted. A 2014 study of Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development countries concluded that wealth inequality was at its highest level for the past half century. Speakers will explore the factors behind increasing disparities and the role social enterprises can play to achieve a more equitable future, while fundamentally shifting the global equity paradigm.

Ready, Set, Go! Launching the Sustainable Development Goals

PYRAMID ROOM

PANEL DISCUSSION

The launch of the Sustainable Development Goals marks a new era in global development—one that necessitates tighter integration of efforts among international institutions, national governments, corporations, and philanthropic actors. How will individual countries, organizations, and citizens tangibly contribute towards these collective goals? How will this global community define success and ensure accountability? In year one of this historic accord, explore the complex work of turning a global agreement on 17 broad goals into a reality by 2030.

The Changing World of Work: Does the Collaborative Economy Foster Trust or Inequity?

RHODES TRUST LECTURE THEATRE

PANEL DISCUSSION

Traditional market behaviors—renting, lending, sharing, bartering, gifting—are being upended. A new economic system of decentralized marketplaces has emerged. By leveraging under-utilized assets and people to unlock value, collaborative economy platforms bypass traditional institutions to directly match needs with haves. Critics argue that rather than empowering individuals, these models amplify existing inequity by further disassociating workers from their industries, while deteriorating job security and paths for career progress. Join us to explore the tension between worker exploitation and empowerment.

Peace + Prosperity: Youth Seizing the Future

LECTURE THEATRE 4

PANEL DISCUSSION

In many of the world's urban centers—especially those wracked by persistent conflict—lack of leadership development and employment opportunities leads to further unrest among younger generations. But, with the right skills and opportunities, young people can leverage leadership, innovation, and an entrepreneurial spirit to build peaceful and sustainable livelihoods for themselves and future generations. Hear from those at the forefront of youth empowerment in complex places—including some young people who are breaking down barriers, and inspiring and equipping their peers.

In Memoriam

Soraya Salti

FOUNDER, INJAZ AL-ARAB

The Skoll Foundation mourns the loss of Soraya Salti, founder of INJAZ al-Arab. Soraya and her sister, Jumana, both died tragically and unexpectedly in November 2015.

Soraya was an outstanding leader and became the first Arab woman to be honored with the Skoll Award for Social Entrepreneurship in 2009. As the founder and leader of INJAZ al-Arab, she touched the lives of hundreds of thousands of Arab youth, working with them to overcome unemployment and inspiring them to believe they had the potential to shape their lives and the future of their countries.

Her legacy lives on as INJAZ continues to reach and prepare millions of young people throughout the Middle East to realize their full potential.

Together with her many friends, family, and admirers, we grieve the loss of a wonderful woman and member of our community, knowing that we can best honor her legacy by redoubling our efforts to help transform the lives of the young people she believed in so deeply.

ENVIRONMENTAL FOOTPRINT

To minimize the footprint of the Skoll World Forum, we have taken great care to ensure that the entire event prioritizes sustainable practices. Therefore, each and every product you see at the Forum, from signage and production sets to the furniture, was made using local, sustainable products and reused from prior years whenever possible.

In addition, all paper materials were made using responsible sources. Whenever possible meals include fair-trade products and local produce.

Specific practices include:

- Using local, sustainable, and fair-trade items in lunches and delegate meals when possible
- Placing composting and recycling stations throughout meeting venues
- Using reusable signage to eliminate one-time usage as much as possible
- Printing programs using responsibly-sourced paper and ink
- Eliminating all extraneous packaging, such as bags and folders
- Collecting and reusing bamboo lanyards and plastic badge holders
- Providing reusable water bottles and water stations
- Encouraging mass transit to the Forum from London
- Providing a carbon-offset link for attendees to offset their travel

Please leave your badge and lanyard at Saïd Business School to be reused. Thank you!

COLLISIONS VIRTUAL REALITY

FILM SCREENING

STORIES
OF CHANGE
SUNDANCE INSTITUTE AND THE SKOLL FOUNDATION

Collisions, directed by artist/filmmaker Lynette Wallworth, is a virtual reality journey into the homeland of indigenous elder Nyarri Morgan and the Martu tribe in remote Western Australia. Nyarri's first contact with western culture came in the 1950s via a dramatic collision between his traditional world view and cutting edge Western science and technology when he witnessed firsthand and with no context, an atomic test. Nyarri offers us a view into what he saw and shares his perspective on the Martu way to care for the planet. Collisions focuses on the needs of future generations as we dive head-long into the fourth industrial revolution. Director Lynette Wallworth and producer Nicole Newnham connected around this story as Sundance Stories of Change storytelling advisors at the 2014 Skoll World Forum, and will be on hand to discuss the project, both as a cutting-edge feat of artistry and technology and as an example of immersive storytelling that has already had a profound impact on audiences at Sundance and Davos.

This 15-minute short will be screened in the Virtual Reality Lounge throughout the Forum, with the filmmakers available periodically for Q&A. Please see the screening schedules in the Entrance Hall and Virtual Reality Lounge.
